THE Red Coats are coming

The campers move in this week end and the red-coat invasion of the surrounding hills and valleys will start at seven Monday morning when the opening blast will be fired at antlered deer. The bucks will be the objective for two weeks, the season ending December 12. To be legal they must have two or more points on an antler, or an antler three or more inches long. (And if you are close enough to conclusively settle those qualifications you might try a rope.)

An indication of the number of hunters to be expected before the buck and doe seasons end may be found in the license sale. Warren county was allocated 16,500 special antlerless permits this year and the county treasurer's office has sold 15,000 of them.

This suggests that Warren county will have at least 12,000 visitors during the three-day antlerless season, which will be held Dec. 14, 15, and 16. Add to that figure over one thousand Warren county residents, who probably will be out there after failing to get their bucks, and you have a lively three days, weather permitting.

These figures are based on the fact that 2733 resident licenses have been sold here. The rest of the 15,000 antlerless deer license purchasers must be from other counties where they bought their regular hunting license. The county treasurer's office also sold 1,055 licenses to non-residents. And the archers bought 796 permits for their special season, which didn't make much of a dent in the herd.

* WHAT WILL THEY GET?

Most of them will enjoy a fair work-out and bring back a few lungfuls of mountain air, sore muscles, and, we hope, pleasant memories. About 1400 probably will get their bucks. Last year the county turned in 1216 tags. The year before the area produced 1428 tags. In 1956 when there was no doe season the buck tags numbered 1404.

Considering the number of antlerless doe licenses sold the percentage during those days is not as good as that enjoyed in the antlered season, but it probably is well that such is the case. Three days of shooting to a larger degree would create a bombardment that might not be conducive to a ruddy state of good health.

The antlerless kill last year was numbered at 2347 in Warren county. The year before it was 2861.

Statewide the antlered kill last year was 46,738 which was lower than the 1957 total of 49,254. The doe record last year was 65,187, much higher than the 55,862 of 1957.

* There is little doubt that there is game for you to shoot. Ask the farmers with ruined crops, the forester with browsing problems, and the tourists who enjoy seeing them by the roadside. But once the woods are invaded by the red horde do not expect to tarry near the highway.

You may have to hunt a bit. Wear plenty of red, keep the barrel open, and make sure the target has four legs . . . and for the next two weeks, horns. (Pardon, antlers.)

ANOTHER RED COAT arriving this week end is this jolly hustler who bounces into Warren Saturday afternoon when he will parade through the business section at two o'clock.

In Brief

DRIVER SUED FOR $20,000. A Warren driver was sued for $20,000 and the estate of another was absolved in a law suit which ended in Warren County court Wednesday after a jury deliberated for over four hours.

Sued in the case by three people who suffered injuries in an accident in October of 1957 on the Kiantone rd. in Warren County was Robert Simonsen. All were passengers in a car operated by Frank Adams, Frewsburg, N.Y., when it became involved in an accident with the Simonsen auto. Mr. Adams died since the mishap, but his estate was also being sued. The court, however, absolved the estate.

The court ruled for Clarence Greely $3,000; for George and Clara Ferry $1,000 and $16,000 respectively. All are from Jamestown, N.Y.

TRAFFIC MISHAPS reported by State Police for Thanksgiving Eve numbered three.

One happened at 4:30 in the afternoon about a mile west of Lander on Route 597 where Douglas Dilker, 22, Jamestown, pulled out of a side road and collided with a passing auto operated by Beverly Troxell, 22, of Glasgow, Penna. The Dilker machine sustained $200 damage and the latter between four and five hundred dollars.

Two hours later on Route 62 this side of Russell Harry Motel 21 of Elizabeth, Penna., was having difficulties making it up a grade on the slippery highway and as Charles Thomas, 31 Brook st., Warren, came down the hill the crash occurred. Total damage was estimated at $700.

Oswald Miaski, Clarendon, was sent to Warren General Hospital with injuries sustained when his machine was struck on the left side at 11 p.m. near the west borough line of Clarendon. Police stated Jack Lane, 31 of Tiona, cut across the center line when he hit the Miaski machine. The Clarendon man's car received about $500 damage. There was hardly any loss to the other.

HOLIDAY CRASH. The Scandia-Onville road was the scene of a Thanksgiving Day accident. About four miles out of Scandia Harry Haskins, 18, R. D. 1, Russell, skidded into a parked car belonging to Paul Wilcox, Youngsville. The damage sustained by each vehicle was estimated at $150.

VEHICLE HIT BY TRAIN. A station wagon owned by Leroy Schneck, 602 Market st., Warren, was hit by a New York Central train at 4 p.m. Wednesday. The train was proceeding north when it struck the auto which was parked on the east curb, north of Fifth st. Damage estimates are unknown.

ANOTHER CHILD HIT. Another youngster was hit by an automobile in Warren, as Jo Henry, 4 years old, of 810 Lexington avenue, darted between several parked cars into the path of an auto driven by Thelma Berlin, 38, of 1310 Jackson Run Road. The mishap, which occurred Wednesday at 11:50 a.m. on Lexington ave., brought a broken left leg and a bump on the head to the tot. This is the second child which has been hit in the past week.

CHRISTMAS ARTICLES to be distributed throughout the county was the main project discussed at the Junior Red Cross meeting held last Monday night. President George Frits reminded the teacher sponsors present that the membership campaign for the Junior Red Cross will begin on Dec. 7. Other projects for the year, such as an album exchange, gift boxes, a school chest, and an art exchange, were also talked over at the meeting.

THERE'S A DIFFERENCE between the assessment of Christmas tree land and land intended for longer term forest plantings. The assessors office has given assurance that the reforestation projects are not subject to the same values as short term Christmas tree plantings.

This should eliminate apprehension on the part of farmers and other landowners who wish to plant idle land to trees for wood products, erosion control, and wildlife cover, says Charles Merroth, district forester for the Pennsylvania Department of Forests and Waters. The Christmas tree landowners are appealing their assessments but the outcome has no bearing on other tree growers.

GOOD EMPLOYEES are leaving state service because industry and the federal government pay up to one hundred per cent more for comparable work. This was emphasized at a convention meeting of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees in Harrisburg last week end.

Attending from the Warren State hospital were Marvin Wensel, Harold Check, Jack Henry, Fred Mack, and Jesse King. All state departments and the governor's office were represented. Mr. Henry was elected to the executive board.

MEN IN SERVICE. Midshipman David C. Honhart, son of Mrs. A. C. Honhart, 305 Fourth ave., is a member of the U.S. Naval Academy Glee Club. The songsters made their 1959-60 concert appearance at Washington, D.C., on Nov. 15.

Former WHS student Army Pvt. David E. Bean is now a member of the 24th Infantry Division in Germany. Bean, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Shirley C. Bean, Clarendon, is an armored personnel carrier with his division in Munich.

Qualifying recently as an expert in firing the M-1 rifle was Army Pvt. Charles R. Gadsby, attached as a gunner to the 24th Infantry Division in Germany. Gadsby is a 1953 graduate of WHS and was employed by Sylvania Electric Products, Inc., before entering the service. His wife, Nancy, resides in Clarendon.

MEMBERSHIP DRIVE. Chairman of this year's YMCA membership drive, William Hill, Jr., presided over the first report meeting held at the Y Tuesday evening. The turnout for this initial meeting was large and the president reminded the men that all team workers must be contacted so that they may report their success in the current drive at the final meeting to be held Dec. 1 at 5:30 p.m. at the Y.

PROCEEDS FROM A DANCE sponsored by the Mason Recreation Center on Nov. 14 were used to make up baskets of food for needy people in the area. The dance, which was well attended, was held at the Armory on Hickory st.

FOOD FOR THE WILD ONES. This is one of several feeders put out by the Game Commission to supply food for the wild life of the Allegheny National Forest. The bins are generally stocked with corn which is easily accessible for the forest creatures. This particular feeder is located at the head of Elk Run.

WAGE TAX OPPONENTS

The usual outcry against the use of an earned income tax by Warren has been sounded and once more the borough council is being told how to perform its duty. And, as too often is the case, the ultimatum is being pronounced by those who do not reside in the community.

The differences over the earned income tax are obvious and can be debated intelligently from both viewpoints for a full turn of the clock, but when threats are substituted for reason and good sense, the spokesmen for the objectors are not showing the qualification for leadership which they indicate is lacking in the Warren council.

A letter to the borough suggests that the passage of the income tax will be met by a boycott of Warren merchants. Just where do the merchants fit into this decision?

We assure you that this paper will not sit calmly by while the merchants apply a club to council. The merchants are not the power behind the councilmen, and we doubt if they want to be. Council is not elected by the retailers and it is not controlled by these businessmen.

Neither will we placidly accept an ultimatum from any group inside or outside of Warren. If they have a case, they certainly have every right allowed in this democracy to present it. But it ends right there. Council can reach its own decision after considering all the facts.

We assure you that the Warren borough council is well aware of the problems involved in the levying of an income tax. It is obvious that it has delayed this action for several years and has used every reasonable tax (and at least one unfair assessment) to meet the budget requirements.

Council does not require a delegation or letters to remind it that those who reside outside of Warren do not like to pay taxes into the Warren kitty. But it also is fully aware that these people live in boroughs and townships which have the right to use the very same tax, and by so doing be absolved from paying it in Warren.

We strongly suspect that much of the opposition to an income tax is not based on an unwillingness to pay it to Warren or any distant community in which the workmen are employed or businessmen have their offices and stores. We are quite certain that the real reason is that most of these people do not recognize a fair tax when they see it and are opposed to an income tax no matter who collects it.

If this were not so they would be approaching their own officials instead of the Warren borough council. They could have their present real estate taxes lowered or their head taxes removed and replace the funds with the income tax. It would be more fair than either of the replaced levies because it would be based on the taxpayer's ability to pay.

There is a side to this issue which never seems to be raised. It is the position of the community in which an industry is located. The plant usually would not be situated there if it were not for roadways, police and fire protection, lighting, sewers, water, schools, libraries, recreation facilities and all the rest of the services which attract industry. To ask those given a job in such plants to pay a comparatively small percentage of the cost of the very services which make their work possible is not demanding very much.

If a man chooses to enjoy the luxury of living in a strictly residential community while he travels to an industrial area for his livelihood he must be prepared to pay a little higher cost than is true of others. Anyone who prefers to live in Warren but wants a job that is made possible by Jamestown hasn't very much about which to complain if a small percentage of his earnings go into the operation costs of that city.

We suggest that those who cannot afford such luxury should move to the city where they are employed. It is their choice to make, and no amount of hammering they may do can be expected to change the actions of those who are officials in the industrial city.

Unless an industry has reasons peculiar to itself that require open spaces and even isolation it will look for a community in which to locate and will study what each potential situation has to offer. Those offerings cost money, most of it local tax money.

To allow half the employees to move out of the community after the plant has been obtained and not continue to pay at least a small portion of the cost seems a mite unfair. And to permit half of them to come in from other areas and enjoy the benefits provided through the work created and not bear some of the expense also seems a bit unsound.

As we said earlier, you can argue both sides through quite a round of interesting approaches to the subject. And that is as it should be. But when you flex your muscles and talk of boycotts against those who are not responsible you are out of order.

Turn your eyes to your own community. Speak to your own officials. Utilize this fair tax for your own uses and allow the Warren borough council to manage its own business as we in Warren want it. Remember, every tax comes out of your income. Why not do it the fair way?

ASIDES

DON'T SEND A BUCK

Your new driving license in Pennsylvania will cost two dollars. When you receive your license in the next few days it will read one dollar, but it will be wrong. Since the cards were printed the state has changed the price. DON'T FORGET! SEND TWO DOLLARS for your driver's license. Otherwise you will have to send another dollar later and you will suffer a delay in your driving privileges.

LESSON NUMBER ONE

Somewhere we read or heard that the Democrats had organized a watch dog committee and that at their organization meeting only nine of the ten Warren wards showed up. The first thing the watchers better do if they are going to keep an eye on Warren political activities is to learn that nine wards are all we have.

* * *

WE SHOULD LIVE SO LONG

The next major medical discovery will add fifty years to our lives. If we were sure of that we would start all over again.

It is expected to be commonplace for people to last 125 years. Today the expectancy has jumped to 70. It was only 48 when they celebrated New Years in 1900. No wonder they celebrated.

When we uncover the secrets of tissue formation we can expect a dramatic increase in life expectancy, similar to the increases that accompanied the discovery of germs and how to kill them. Our next major revelation will have answers for heart trouble and cancer.

So the United Steelworkers of America were told recently by Harold W. Williams, executive director of the Pennsylvania advisory board on problems of older workers.

He said that even without a dramatic breakthrough we can expect a life expectancy of 82 by the year 2,000. Well, good for them. He also added some comfort by saying that the death rate for people between the ages of 65 and 85 has gone down 15 per cent in the last fifteen years. That is rapid progress.

He stressed the need for an adjustment of the retirement age.

People at 65 today are still able to do a good job because that figure was picked in the 19th century when the expectancy was only 50.

But our problem is that we don't need them even though they are healthy and capable. We do not even have full employment for the ones under 65. And they do not contribute to the economy with their $1,440 a year which the average retired couple receives. It requires far beyond that to live in the city, and even in the rural areas it results in a tight budget.

ERIE SEAWAY PORT

The addition of a high speed commodity crane to the Duquesne Marine Terminal in Erie will double the number of ships using that port next year. A year ago no ships came to Erie. This year twenty-five ships have moved in pig iron, oil, and other materials and products. Next year the number should double as the St. Lawrence Seaway feeds them to the lakes and Erie facilities grow.

This will mean much to the economy of this entire area. Warren county will have more to offer industrially than ever before.

ANTI-INFLATION PRODUCT

The bituminous coal industry is claiming to be the main anti-inflation commodity of the day. To prove its point the price of coal at the mine is revealed to have been $4.86 a ton in 1958. In 1948 it was $4.99. This reduction has been effected despite the pay increase which provides the coal miner with $24.25 a day, the highest in the world says the coal spokesmen.

This was accomplished by increasing man output. It was 6.26 tons per man in 1948. Ten years later it had increased to 11.32 tons per man.

The retail price has increased only $3 in that time, and this is due to increased transportation costs, merchandising expenses, and intermediate factors, say the coal policy people.

CONSULTANT. Miss Margaret Wright, nursing consultant from Harrisburg, has been visiting the Warren State Hospital for the purpose of discussing the scope of nursing education and facilities in Pennsylvania with the nursing and attendant personnel.

PUBLIC EVENTS

THE MOST . . . outstanding theatrical group ever to perform in the Warren area will be presenting two plays in Beaty junior high auditorium tomorrow (Saturday). The famed Canadian Players of Stratford, Canada, coming to Warren directly from Washington, D.C., where they have been playing to packed houses at the Library of Congress, will present two great classics, "The Cherry Orchard", and "The Taming of the Shrew".

The Canadian Players are being brought to Warren by the Junior Chamber of Commerce as a cultural attraction, and all proceeds will be donated to the community swimming pool fund.

To interest Warren county high school students in the plays, an essay contest is currently being conducted in which the students must base his paper on the context of one of the plays. A twenty-five dollar prize has been posted for the winner.

"The Cherry Orchard" will be given at a matinee, beginning at 2:30 p.m., and the "Taming of the Shrew", an evening performance beginning at 8:30. Tickets are on sale in Warren at the B & B Smoke Shop and at ticket headquarters located next to Mack's News Stand on Penna. ave., W.

NEW STRATFORD SHAKESPEAREAN FESTIVAL THEATRE

Others Say ...

HOW IT STARTED

We have written many pieces about the Stratford Shakespearean Festival and its annual attractions for those who enjoy the classics in theatrical form. This Saturday the Canadian Players, consisting of players from Stratford, will be seen in two plays on the Beaty stage, "The Taming of the Shrew" and "The Cherry Orchard".

What is back of this outstanding touring group? Here is an account of the Stratford festival's formation:

The idea of holding a Canadian Shakespearean Festival in the small namesake of the English poet's birthplace was conceived by a Stratford-born journalist, Tom Patterson. As originally envisaged, the scheme called for the utilization of the local open-air bandstand, and a budget of about $30,000.

Approaching the city council with his idea, Mr. Patterson found sympathetic ears and in January of 1952 was voted $125 to visit New York City in search of talent. Although he returned from this trip empty handed, the idea of a Shakespearean Festival had captured the imagination of many of the local citizens and in March, a committee was set up under the chairmanship of Dr. Harrison A. Showalter to investigate the scheme further.

From the outset this committee felt that expert advice was required and the following month it extended an invitation to Tyrone Guthrie, former administrator of the Old Vic Theatre and noted British director, to visit Stratford and give his impressions of the plan. Dr. Guthrie arrived in July and spent two weeks investigating not only the suitability of Stratford as a site for such a project, but also the current state of Canadian theatre.

At the end of this time he agreed to be associated with the venture on three conditions: that a star and experienced theatre personnel be employed, that a closed-in theatre (he suggested a tent) be constructed, and that a revolutionary "open" stage similar to that used in Shakespeare's day be built instead of the more conventional proscenium style. He estimated that to carry out such a plan successfully would require a budget of about $150,000. The committee accordingly raised its sights and, at Dr. Guthrie's suggestion, sent Tom Patterson on a "star shopping" tour to England.

As a result of this trip, negotiations were successfully completed with Alec Guinness to appear as star, Tyrone Guthrie as director, Tanya Moiseiwitsch as designer; and Cecil Clarke as production manager and assistant director. With the incredible dream rapidly becoming a reality, the committee made application to the Provincial Government for a charter and in October set up a non-profit organization to be known as the Stratford Shakespearean Festival Foundation of Canada with Harrison A. Showalter as president and A. M. Bell as vice-president.

In December of 1952, Dr. Guthrie returned to Canada and held auditions in Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto and Stratford during which time he interviewed nearly four hundred actors and actresses. He also held further discussions with the Board of Directors of the Festival Foundation on plans for the summer, discussed choices of plays and helped in many other detailed arrangements.

With the arrival in Stratford of Cecil Clarke in January 1953, organization began on the many behind-the-scenes aspects of the theatre. Further negotiations were carried on with theatrical talent in England which resulted in the engaging of Irene Worth as leading actress, Douglas Campbell and Michael Bates as supporting leads, Jacqueline Cundall as head property maker, and Ray Difffen, theatrical cutter from the Stratford Memorial Theatre, as head costumier.

Meanwhile the three and a half tons of canvas, forming the walls and roof of the theatre tent designed by the U. S. Tent and Awning Co., were under construction in Chicago, the sixteen-tier concrete foundation of the theatre was being poured, and the diamond-shaped open stage was assembled in the Stratford city park on land donated by the Stratford Parks Board.

While the theatre proper was not ready until the middle of June, rehearsals began on June 1st on a mock-up stage in the local Agricultural Building. Finally on July 13th the Canadian Stratford Festival opened its first five-week season with a stirring performance of "Richard III" starring Alec Guinness in the title role with a supporting Canadian company. This was followed the next evening with the second production of the two-play repertoire, "All's Well That Ends Well", starring Irene Worth as Helena.

Public reaction to the swirling, colourful productions was overwhelmingly enthusiastic. Spectators crowded into the theatre tent night after night for an unprecedented total attendance of 98 per cent of capacity. Visitors came from points as far away as Florida and Texas in such numbers that the original five-week schedule had to be extended to six.

Since that first season, the Festival has grown in scope to include music, film and fine art attractions in addition to the dramatic productions which form its core. The original tent has been replaced by a permanent building which houses the workshops and offices as well as the stage and auditorium.

Originally administered by a Board of Governors and a small summer staff, the Festival now employs a permanent staff of about twenty-five who carry on the day-to-day business under the direction of the General Manager and the Board.

WAY BACK WHEN — Singer Jane Morgan, dressed as Lillian Russell, will bring back a touch of the past on Perry Como's colorcast show Wednesday, Dec. 16 on NBC-TV.

The Sin Of Radio And TV Ratings

By John Crosby

The news that ratings will be investigated is welcome only if it is a thorough and fearless and intelligent appraisal. Never has such a huge industry been so hopelessly cowed by a set of cold, hoplessly unreliable, totally meaningless numbers. Perhaps a couple of statisticians will take the stand and cow the gentlemen from Congress as they have the industry.

Statisticians are assuming the vestments of the clergy and of that latterday clergy, the psychiatrists. All statisticians open their pronouncements by telling you that statistics are an exact science and you must not question their figures, unless you are another statistician, in which case you would have more sense than to open your yap.

But no statistician has ever been able to explain to me why, if one Republican dentist from North Dakota is listening to Bob Hope, all other Republican dentists must be assumed to be listening to Hope, too. I am willing to concede the statisticians (while not really believing it) the ability to predict with reasonable accuracy how many times a flipped coin will turn up heads. But the measurement of taste, I think is something way beyond the power of figures. There is a wild, wonderful variability in the preference of people about even such uncontested personalities as Dinah Shore or George Gobel. There are people who don't like these worthy folk and these mavericks are what make a democracy what it is.

There are some people who like Gobel some nights and don't on other nights. There are other nights when Gobel is more likable than other nights. There are other nights when Gobel is at his most lovable, but the viewer's digestion or his relations with his wife are in such grievous state that the guy loathes Gobel anyhow. It's conditions like these that make a mockery of a set of figures. Especially when you remember that Nielsen, the biggest figure juggler of them all, takes roughly a thousand sets to project a case and habits and action of 170,000,000 individuals -- any million or so of which might be in a cantankerous, non-statistic bearing out mood that night.

I have many objections to the ratings, but the most violent of these is the assumption that we're all sheep. My second objection is that ratings simply don't square with my own ideas. There are high-rated programs that are so obscure no one I know has ever seen or heard of them. Other low-rated programs seem to have been seen by everyone I know.

Right away I run into the riposte that I know only eggheads. The only trouble with this theory is that it isn't true. Then I hear that I'm only testing one area -- the fact is that I travel as far as Nielsen does and talk to many more people than he samples.

Now let's see -- I have about 10,000 other reasons why I find ratings both inaccurate and odious. To pick on one of the first category at random, ratings seem to have no relationship at all with sales. Terribly popular programs like "I Love Lucy" failed to sell any Philip Morris cigarettes, while frightfully low-rated shows like Faye Emerson's sold Pepsi Cola by the ocean-load. To pick on another, rating services (until recently) didn't agree with each other in any respect.

If Congress really wants to peer into ratings, let them examine the relative ratings of Red Buttons about ten years ago. In a single week, he fluctuated from first to about 30th on various rating services. If the statistics are such an exact business, why can't the rating services agree, and why does each rating service heap scorn on every other rating service?

Who checks up on the rating services? The difference of four or five points could mean the difference between millions of dollars to the package firm that puts out the program. If ever a business was wide open to temptation, the rating business certainly is. A Congressional Committee has already said it has some evidence of rigging. Any evidence of rigging of ratings at all would put the whole rating system under a cloud that might never be dispelled.

And, even if ratings were an accurate counting of heads -- something I don't for a moment concede -- they don't even pretend to count hearts. How bored are the viewers? Or how angry? Or how loving? Or is a set perhaps playing to an empty room? Non of these variables are counted by ratings and they are all important. A research outfit tried to fill in some of these gaps by actually entering people's houses to discover if people were watching and which members of the family they were. The finds of this group were wildly at variance with Nielsen and Trendex.

And lastly, I'm against ratings because -- even if they were accurate -- I think they are totally immoral. The worship of ratings to the exclusion of any respect for quality led to the quiz show scandal. The quiz shows were buying an audience, pandering to a vicarious feeling of greed, reducing the viewer to his lowest element.

Ratings assume that a man -- any man -- has only one dimension, forgetting that even the best of us have our low taste. By appealing to that low taste, the broadcasters assume that that is the whole man. This is degrading to the viewer and it degrades television and that is the real sin of rating worship.

AMERICAN LIFE

NBC's series of public affairs specials for 1960 will explore five important aspects of American life. They are studies in alcoholism, old age, suburban living, modern architecture and education.

The programs, which will be either 60 or 90 minutes in length, have been listed as follows: "Reflections on Booze"; "The Living End", study in geriatrics; "The Big Move", focusing on suburban locations; "The Shape of Things", documentary on contemporary American architecture; "World In Our Hands," an examination of American secondary schools and the urgent need to improve them. Dates for the programs have not been scheduled.

***

FIVE FINGERS TO STAY

NBC-TV network has exercised its option and ordered a second 13-week cycle of the full-hour adventure series, "Five Fingers", which deals with international espionage.

FUTURE FIGHTS IN DOUBT

It has been rumored that NBC is considering the future of the Cavalcade of Sports Friday night boxing matches because of the poor quality of fights scheduled and resulting low ratings. Gillette, the sponsor, is happy as is and wants to continue the program.

***

CBS GOES WITH IKE

CBS network will cover the President's tour abroad with four "Eye-witness to History" programs.

Dates and subjects are: Monday, Dec. 7, Visit to Rome; Dec. 12, trip to Turkey, Pakistan, Afghanistan, India; Sunday, Dec. 20, conference with Western leaders; Wednesday, Dec. 23, conclusion of summit meetings, trip to Spain and Morocco, and home.

MET OPERA BROADCASTS

WBEN Radio will carry the Metropolitan Opera broadcasts direct from the opera house stage in New York City every Saturday afternoon at 2 p.m.

Dates and titles of operas scheduled are: Nov. 28, Aida; Dec. 5, The Gypsy Baron; Dec. 12, Manon; Dec.

"ONE IS THE ENGINE" is the name of the book that Mrs. Harry Tourtellott is reading to her kindergarten pupils at Home Street School. The children were given the engine by a nationally known firm and, according to their teacher, they enjoy its presence very much. They did, however, attach their own name to the engine, "The Home Street Special" -- what else?

STOP FREEZING
anywhere

Just flip the switch on Knipco's "Super-75" portable heater and you get enough forced heat to warm a shed, workshop, or "spot heat" an outside area. You keep warm on the coldest winter days. Weighs only 45 lbs. so you can carry it anywhere; runs on kerosene or No. 1 fuel oil; plugs in any 115 volt AC outlet. No vent needed. The larger F125, on wheels, works just as easy but puts out more heat. Stop in soon for a demonstration.

Science Is Too Snooty For Results

By Inez Robb

In our day science is just too big for mankind, if not for its own britches.

It's so big it can blow up the world in one or two hellish bangs. Most of us Joe Doakes accept this itchy fact, but blessed if we can explain how the darned thing is built, just how it works or why.

As the owner of a share or two in some electronic and chemical corporations, I annually receive statements complete with photographs of plant operations showing machinery and processes so involved and dehumanized that even the head of Clan Robb can't make head or tail of 'em, and he's smart.

There is now nothing homey or comfortable about science as in the days when Ben Franklin, wonderful, brilliant Ben, went out in his backyard and sent a kite aloft to investigate lightning and electricity. It is easy to get the hang of what Ben was up to, even as I grasp the import of that age-old picture with the apple about to knock Newton on the head.

On the same level, most of us parse an equally familiar picture, that of the lad -- James Watt? -- casing the steam spouting from the kitchen kettle.

But today science is aloof and aloft. Shucks! It is hung all over with signs reading: "Keep Out! This Means YOU!" And if you get nosy, you're in real trouble with the FBI, although goodness knows who could understand what is going on in the Frankensteinian labs, even if he got past the barbed wire.

So when I read about a modern, bona fide scientific experiment that I can understand, appreciate and use,

I rejoice and the Heavens are made glad that out of the laboratories comes something simple, designed to fulfill a crying need, and non-lethal.

To give the devil his due, the U.S. Department of Agriculture (and we don't mention all those mounds of surpluses today), chemical companies and universities are trying to perfect a chemical compound that will so retard the growth of a lawn that it will only have to be mowed three or four times a year!

Oh, they're on the track, all right. Or as S. H. Wittner, professor of horticulture at Michigan State University, puts it, "We have some promising leads."

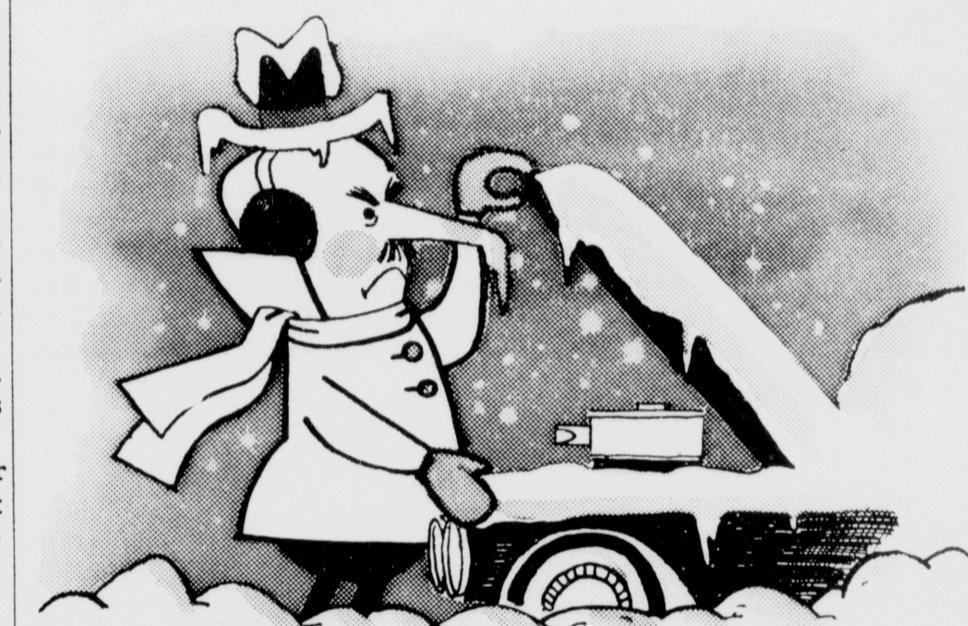

Why that is almost as good as saying that within a few years even the electric and the gas mower will be as good as in semi-retirement. Because it is one woman's opinion that the boy or man of the house approaches the power mower today with the same martyred, hang-dog look that used to afflict my boy cousins in our salad days.

There is just as much of that abused, what's-so-great-about-the-good-old-summertime air about the chauffeur behind the power mower as in the days when the mower was powered by elbow grease, shank's mare and Huff and Puff, a pre-television version of Bert and Harry. Don't ask me why! But it's so.

If science can actually produce something that will inhibit the growth of lawn grass, not to mention crab-grass, chickweed, et al, it will begin to win back the affection that went boom at Alamogordo. Man doesn't tend to pour out his love on something he can't even begin to understand, such as modern science.

But he can be grateful for a self-service lawn that needs attention only every six weeks. And he can understand a chemical that will inhibit the growth of trees, so they won't tangle with overhead wires, and discourage the rampant nature of forsythia.

Let science get out of its ivory tower and back to the grass roots, if you will pardon a pun, and people, mark my words, will ante up more money for that moon shot.

WINTER DRIVING—READY OR NOT?

Here's some advice on how to ready your car for winter driving, care for it during the cold months ahead, and how to drive safely when streets are slippery and visibility is poor. These twelve tips come from George J. Cutler, director of service for the Plymouth-Dodge-Soto-Valiant Division of Chrysler Corporation.

- When starting the car in the morning, depress the accelerator to half-open throttle to release the choke. IMPORTANT: Do not pump the foot accelerator.
- After starting in the morning, DON'T let the car run at idle waiting for it to warm up. You're just wasting gas. Start gently and drive slowly until it warms up.
- Keep your gas tank filled. Cold weather causes condensation and water will get into the gas line.
- Have radiator flushed and fill with anti-freeze. Be sure that crankcase, transmission and rear axle lubricants are proper grades for cold weather. Have motor tuned and battery checked.
- Keep windows clean. Be sure defroster operates properly, windshield wipers are in good condition. Put anti-freeze in windshield washer.
- When planning a winter trip, allow plenty of time to get there. Storms slow traffic.
- Drive with extra caution in the winter. Slippery streets and poor visibility double the possibilities of accidents.
- Never drive a car when you have frost or ice on the windows. Take a little time and scrape it off.
- Be sure you have plenty of ventilation in the passenger compartment. Engine fumes can have serious effects.
- Have your car washed regularly. Salt on pavements causes rust and corrosion.
- In "snow country" carry tire chains, a shovel, a tow rope, and a blanket.
- Avoid excessive speed, even when the highway appears clear. There may be ice around the next curve.

TER MOTORING
The pleasure of motoring ceases many people when the snows lie and the roads lose their lines and much of their natural texture. So nervous are many about winter highways that the radio reports often develop in them a case of butterflies before they walk out the door.

The lady told us that when she returns to the constant radio warnings about the highway conditions during her breakfast she often wonders if she should stay home from work. They make it sound like a tunnel of horrors.

It probably is wise that many people do stay off the roads in the winter months. Their nervousness perhaps reflects their inability to cope with the prevailing conditions, and if this is true the motoring world is safer if they keep the car locked up or let someone else do the driving.

But they are missing much. Though some of our literary greats have been inclined to suggest that the beauty of nature is lost in a white cloak during the winter, we suggest that there is much beauty to be found in a ride through our hills and along the river at this time of year.

THE OBSERVER

This is especially true when the snow is heavy and its blanket provides a cleanly, new beauty. Here is much enjoyment for the moment and a huge store of pictures to be captured and stored for hours at home.

Much has been written about how to drive in the winter, but there is only one way to learn and that is to get out there with the wheel in your hands and do it. Unfortunately all of us must go through this period or there would be no driving from fall to spring. And in some cases that might be a life-saver.

If you choose to adventure forth into the valley of drifts there are a few little things you can do to forestall trouble. If it is real cold, idle your engine awhile before driving your car. Lubrication is vital to machinery and a bit of engine warmth at a slow speed will lengthen the life of your motor and maybe your own by loosening up the "joints".

A small can, box, or bag of sand is nice to have tucked away in your car during these cold months. If you get stuck because one wheel wants to spin, a sprinkle of sand will take you out.

A dirty windshield never should be allowed, and cleaning it with your automatic washer can blind you if the solution freezes. Your window-washer also should have a solvent that will keep it from adding a layer of ice to obstruct the vision of your windshield.

As for handling your car on ice, it is somewhat like riding a bicycle. When you slide to the right you turn the wheels to the right. If to the left you turn to the left. This is not done with a violent twist. You feel in the desired direction just enough to bring your rear wheels back into line.

At the start of your drive get the "feel" of the road. Small touches to right and left will help you find how much those rear wheels will react to turns of the car. Once you have this feel you can control your vehicle. This will vary also with the speed and again you must get that feel as you move along the highway. You also must find it on the curves.

It actually is possible to "use" the ice to help you get around curves and to drive the car. Until you "use" the give of the wheels it is apt to use you. Once you have this feel and keep your speed within safe limits winter driving loses much of its terror.

Obviously you cannot stop as soon on ice as on a dry pavement. And it follows without explanation that you must be moving more slowly in order to stop in the same distance. The application of the brakes also is a trick to be acquired.

Never press them to the floor as you do in the summer. Touch them in successive presses, never leaving them on long enough to start a skid. If you can FEEL the wheels, the brakes can be applied just enough to slow the wheels down but not to lock them.

Judge your stops in advance and let the motor slow the wheels as much as possible. By the time you get to the intersection or parking area your light touches of the brake and the motor should have slowed the car down enough to make a full stop possible.

Again you will find variance and it is a good idea to occasionally get the feel of the surface by applying the brakes lightly to see how much friction is available to help you stop the car. Snow often will assist you. Other times it adds to the slippery conditions. And ice is ice.

Starting the car also requires skill. You can't give it blast of gasoline and take off full tilt as you can on red lights in summer. If the pavement is slippery you will do no more than spin in your tracks, and possibly will send your car skidding sideways into the path of another.

Learn just how easy you must feed the gas to get your wheels started in slow revolutions. Your car then will ease into motion and soon you can gain more speed. It is a feeling you must gain through practice.

Stuck in the snow . . . don't dig your way out until you have tried easing the wheels, just as you do when starting. And if you must dig out, rock it back and forth. And once you get going, keep ploughing.

It is a new kind of driving and it requires new skills that really are fun and lend a feeling of accomplishment. Common sense and reasonable speed combine to make winter driving reasonably safe, and it takes you through some very delightful surroundings.

To take them up in the order of their importance, Leonard Bernstein and the Philharmonic bringing us the splendors of the "divine Mozart" from Venice under the sponsorship of the Ford Motor Company is one of those rare treats that this lavish but undiscriminating han I think I was most impressed wi the early years when melodies f lowed out of Gershwin like water. Some of the songs I'd never heard were "Fidgety Feet" and "You Don't Know the Half of It, Dear Blues." And along with those we such rousing numbers as "Close Your Hands" and "Strike Up the Band." Then came a whole section devoted to love—everything from "The Man I Love" to "Who Cares" with their lovely blue chords. Pol Bergen, Vic Damone, and Ella Fitzgerald sang, Andre Previn and Teddy Wilson played, and Marg and Gower Champion danced to the music. Ira Gershwin provided short commentary. Mostly, though the music spoke for itself eloquently enough.

The choreography, I thought, was a little skimpy and I rather wished for one big number to pull the customers out of their chairs. But there were compensations—Andre Previn and the orchestra playing "Concerto in F," Miss Bergen singing "The Man I Love" with its piercingly simple and direct lyrics (to give Ira Gershwin a bit of his due) and Miss Ella singing "Summertime."

The Gene Kelly show started out very large and then dwindled a little as it went along. I loved a dance duet with Carol Lawrence to "Shall We Dance?" which had great grace and charm. Even better was a duet with his old companion from "Singin' in the Rain," Donald O'Connor who in many respects is a better dancer. There's practically nothing I'd rather do than watch these two get together in a lazy, relaxed, and tuneful bit of hoofing.

All three of the stars, Mr. Kelly, Mr. O'Connor, and Miss Lawrence got together to do a whole vaudeville bill—magicians, mind-reading acts, comedy trios, and everything but a dog act. It was great fun. Then O'Connor engaged in a marvelous bit of virtuosity, trying to cheer up a weeping drunk, which was utterly mad and gay.

Where Mr. Kelly lost me was in a Spanish sequence which proved conclusively that he shouldn't attempt the gypsy bit. It was very broad and he was trying too hard and somewhere the nuances all got lost. As a final bit he and O'Connor did another tap act, this time sitting down and won me all over again.

Altogether it was a nice week end. (c) 1959 New York Herald Tribune Inc.

FREE BALL-JOINT CHECK

The ball-joints on your car are probably loose if you have:

- ✓ Excessive or uneven tire wear
- ✓ High- or low-speed shimmy
- ✓ Erratic, noisy steering

Let us jack up your car's front-end and make the "Leverage Test" for looseness. If ball-joints are wobbly, you need MOOG Adjustable Ball-Joints. Actually pay for themselves in longer tire life!
